Snow forecast

Updated: 3.30pm Friday 10 April 2015

After the fine and increasingly warm weather the Alps have experienced over the last few days, it will turn slightly cooler (and in places cloudier) on Saturday with the odd shower here and there. However, no major precipitation is expected and many places will stay dry and bright.

It also looks fairly settled next week, with long spells of sunshine and warm afternoon temperatures. All in all, spring remains in control.

Detailed snow forecast:

Austria

Saturday will see variable cloud with sunny spells but also a scattering of showers, especially in the northern and western Austrian Alps, with a dusting of snow here and there above 1800-2000m.

Sunday and Monday will be mostly dry with sunny spells and just the odd isolated shower in the northern and eastern Alps. Freezing levels will be around 2500m.
